wonderful Phenomena at sea.

The ship Lebu arrived at this port from liverpool, yesterday, after a passage of 130 days. The following narraive of some very remarkable phenomena which sere observed while the ship was on the Equator, in the Atlantic, is obtained from the lips of her Captain.

Captain Mackenzie states that while the vessel was crossing the Equator, on the Sho May, she was seized by a street show the continued until she had reached latitude three degrees S. In three days the vessel was carried 240 miles due to disport himself in the river. Leaving his clothing on the leve's slope he was still running, a heavy and confineed sea began to strike the ship no all sides. The rais was pouring in torsent at this time, and continued to do so intervals during the whole course of his sea life. On the 13th of May, about ten o'clock in the forencou, and while the current was still running, a heavy and confineed sea began to strike the ship no all sides. The rais was pouring in torsents at this time, and continued to do so intervals during the day. The water from the pumps were found on examination to be very warm, and a test of the surface had a temperature to le 3t degrees. Water ten feet below the surface had a temperature of 86 degrees. The Captain at once surmised the cause of the phenomena to be a volcance of the phenomena of the phenomena in the phenomena to be a volcance of the phenomena to be a volcance

A VOLCANIC EBUPTION, and subsequent occurrences proved that his surmise was correct. The air was at first very close and sultry, and not a breath of wind was stirring. It was noticed that the current had suddenly cased running. Soon the wind began to blow in strong gusts all around the compass, and what between the running sea and the heavy wind, the vessel was kept spinning round and round. The barometer stood very steady at 29 deposes, 7 minutes. Everybody was on lesk wondering what would come next, but affairs remained in about the same condition until six o'clock in the evening. ondition until six o'clock in the evening,

A LOUD BUSHING NOISE Was heard in the air right over their heads, instantly followed by a very heavy squall. The noise was not over a half minute in duration, but is described as being terrific while it lasted. The Captain cannot say from what quarter the squall came: it seemed to him to strike the ship on both sides at once. Everything was in confusion, but the Captain had the presence of mind to order the sails lowered, and the ship was soon all sing under three lower topsails. The squall did not last long, but settled into A STRONG GALE FROM THE WEST SOUTHWEST. In a few minutes the terrible noise was In a few minutes the terrible noise was again heard, but this time it did not excite the fright that it did at first. The heavens were partially obscured by light rain clouds. Presently the confused running of the sea ceased, and the ship secured before the gale. At 11 o'clock in the evening the gale had subsided, and all was quiet. During the heavies of the wind and rain large numbers of small fish were showered upon the deck. The rushing noise, which was the most noticeable faature of the phenomena. Captain Mackenzie describes as not at all resembling thunder, but seeming all resembling thunder, but seeming rather to be caused by a commotion under the waters. The ship India, which inder the waters. The smp times, which the Lebu, has since been spoken, and reports having experienced the easterly current which Captain Mackenzie describes.—[S.

VULGAR EXTRAVAGANCE.—That eminent statesman and poet, Lamartine, said twenty years ago that if he wanted to get ap a delegation of humble worshipers of royalty he would select Americans. He got this complimentary opinion of us from resident Americans in Paris; and we have continued and kept up the char-acter since then by sending to Europe men made rich through oil, war contracts, Is attached, where nothing but fine Liquors selected from the above stock will be dispensed, which will be presided over by Mr. N. McAl-ISTER, who will be glad to see his old friends.

myli-tf and of late heavy stealings from the treasury of our afflicted Government. It is sickening to sit in cars and steamboats saickening to sit in cars and steamboats and hear these people converse among themselves. Ill-mannered and ignorant, they have not the sense to conceal their defects, and probably sordid and mean as hucksters at home, they have here but one resource to fall back upon, and that is their money. The amazed and amused waiters receive silver when the others that compare and the greedy landlord. give copper, and the greedy landlord pockets gold for the silver sensible peo-ple pay him. We sat at the window of the Imperial at Belfast—may his satanic majesty shake its foundations—and saw an English gentleman, a titled nob at an English gentleman, a titled nob at that, give the porter two pennies for the effort made to get his valies on the omni-bus in which his lordship had quietly seated himself, while an American, who seated himself, while an American, who had ordered a carriage to carry his valuable person to the railway station, pulled out a handful of silver and tossed shilings and half crowns to the same man. After the carriage whirled away this same porter exhibited his gains to his fellow-servants, and could our liberal compatriot have heard their laugh of derision his vulgar blood would have been forced through his thick skin and astonished him with a blush. Jones is fond of repeating a conversation he overheard in a peating a conversation he overheard in a party of this sort, where a young lady wanted to know if they crossed the Alps on camels, adding that she was "dying to ride on a camel." And the intelligent response was that they would see when they got there. At this, a remarkably well educated old gentleman chipped in with the information that this party was with the information that this party was a very ignorant lot: "there never had been a camel within 500 miles of the Alps, unless it was a menagerie; the old style of crossing was on sledges drawn by dogs of the St. Bernard breed, famons big fellows, big as calves. But that's played now; one never saw the Alps at all—the thing was tunneled. You are put in the car somewhere in France, and whiz, bang, you are in Italy in no time." "Dear me," sighed the gentle female, "I don't like that; I do so want to ride a camel."—[Cor. Washington Capitol.

young ladies up the levee, who were out for a sniff of the early morning air. Here was trouble afresh. He told them the horrible story and begged them for all they held dear to bring help. They brought it in the shape of an Italian fisherman up the levee, whom they summoned. Then they hid their faces and departed. The fisherman rescued the bather from the grasp of a forked limb of a tree, into which he had thrust his foot in such a position that the more he struggled the firmer he was held. As he disturbed the limb the current tended to bear it away, and so he thought it was some monster bearing him to destruction.
